No. 590.

Yesterday a Mail arriv'd from Holland.

HE Letters from Vienna do not confirm the News we had by the way of Cologne and Frankfort, that the Emperor had actually declar'd War against the Turks; but they say, That upon the Porte's obstinate Refusal to renounce Asoph, and upon the fresh Instances made to the Emperor by the Court of Russia, to perform his Engagement, his Imperial Majesty had resolv'd to declare War; and not only sent a Copy of the Manifesto for that Purpose to the Czarina, but dispatched a Courier to carry the said Resolution to the Emperor's Ambassador Tahlman, that he may impart it to the Grand Vizier. At the same Time Orders are sent to the Generals of the Troops in Hungary, to prepare all Things for commencing Hostilities against the Turks; and the Departure of the Duke of Lorain, and his Brother Prince Charles, for Hungary, with a Retinue of near 300 Persons, is fixed for the End of this Month. It is certain, that the Duke is to have the Chief Command of the Army that is to act against the Turks, and Count Seckendorf the next, of whom the latter was to set out on the 7th Instant for Hungary. The Letters add, That the Imperial Court is in Treaty with that of Cassel, for a Body of 4000 Auxiliaries.

Mean Time, the Duke of Lorain is soliciting the States of the Empire at Ratisbon, who are of the Roman Catholick Religion, to give him the Post of Velt-Marshal-General of the Armies of the Empire, vacant by the Death of the late Duke of Wurtemberg, which must be filled up by a Roman Catholick; and the Emperor has wrote to the said States, to recommend him. The Dyer shortly expects a Decree, demanding a certain Number of Roman Months, by Way of Free Gift, to be employ'd towards the Expences of the ensuing War against the Turks; his Imperial Majesty having previously sisted most of the Courts of the Empire, to know their Sentiments.

They write from Hanover, That the Baron de Rheeide, Son to the Grand Marshal of that Court, and several other Officers, are set out to make the Campaign in Quality of Volunteers, in the Emperor's Army against the Turks: That it was proposed to his Britannick Majesty, the last Time he was there, to rebuild the Castle of Hanover, and the Palace of Herrenhausen, and a Plan actually shew'd to his Majesty for that Purpose; but upon Consideration, it has since been thought sufficient to make the necessary Repairs to those two Buildings, by which will be sav'd a great Sum of Money, that it would have cost to rebuild them both anew: And that the Regency of that Electorate are taking the necessary Measures for the Support of the People, lest that Scarcity of Provisions, by which Silesia and the Neighbourhood now suffers, should spread into the Empire. For this Purpose they have forbid the Exportation of Corn, fix'd a Price for Merchants to sell it at, and set open the King's Magazines, that particular Persons may buy, exclusive of the Cornfactors and Bakers.

Also Advices from Berlin say, the King of Prussia has order'd all the Avenues of Poland to be well guarded, and nobody to pass them without a Certificate of their Health; because there reigns a Distemper in several Parts of that Kingdom, which is reckoned contagious.

The Letters from Turin relate the Pomp and Joy attending the Entrance of the King and Queen of Sardinia into that City, upon Easter-Monday. As they passed along the Po, from the Palace of la Venerie, the opposite Shore blazed with Bonfires at proper Distances; and the Queen's Pleasure-House, upon a Hill over-against the Gate of the Po, was illuminated from the Bottom to the Top. Their Arrival was proclaim'd by a Triple Salvo of 150 Cannon from the Ramparts of the City and Castle. Their Majesties were received at the Po Gate by the Magistrates and Trading Corporations. The March was begun by 200 Tradesmen on Horseback, with the Vicar of the City at their Head. Then follow'd five of the King's Coaches, drawn by six Horses each, which preceded the Body Coach, attended by a Detachment of the Guards, wherein sat their Majesties, and the Duke of Savoy, the King's eldest Son. Their Coach was follow'd by five others, drawn also by six Horses each; and after them march'd 3 Squadrons of the Life-Guards, and 15 Squadrons of Horse and Dragoons. The Street of the Po was lined on both Sides by the Burghers under Arms, as far as to the Palace of the Duke of Savoy; and from thence six Battalions of the Forces lined the Way to the Royal Palace, which was illuminated, as were also the Duke of Savoy's, and all the Publick Squares, according to the Order of their Architecture. All the Streets were likewise illuminated from the first to the third Stories, and at every Window there were five Rows of Lights; which was a Shew that no City is so capable of furnishing as Turin, because of the Regularity of its Buildings. The Palaces of the King, the Duke of Savoy, the Publick Squares; and, in short, all the Houses of the City, were illuminated for four Nights successively, in the same Manner.

They write from Rome, That the eldest Son of the Chevalier de St. George, having receiv'd the Compliments of the Chief Nobility on his intended Journey, set out next Day (viz. the 18th of April, O. S.) accompany'd by the eldest Son of the Duke de St. Aignan, the French Ambassador, who went with him a little Way out of Town, and then took Leave of him. There went off with him, his Governor Mr. Dunbar, or, as some call him, Dundas, Messieurs Strickland, Clayton, and Gritly, who are all four either English or Scotsmen, 2 Valets de Chambre, a Steward, a Cook, a Butler, 2 Pages, 2 Running Footmen, and 2 Foot-boys, besides some other Domesticks to take Care of his Person and Baggage. He went to our Lady of Loretto, to perform a Vow, and from thence he design'd to travel incog. to Bologna, and the other principal Towns of Italy, by the Name of the Count of Albany.

From Bologna they tell us, That he arrived there on the 23d of April, O. S. and alighted at the House of the Banker Belloni, where, tho' he travels under a feign'd Name, he was welcom'd by the Cardinal Legate, and the Archbishop of that City, and by a Deputation from the Senate, of four Persons; who, upon that Occasion, were vested with the Character of Ambassadors, and went to Belloni's House in two State-Coaches, follow'd by a great many others; but he received them as private Gentlemen. The next Day, which was Sunday, he visited some of the chief Churches, and in the Evening was entertain'd by a magnificent Ball, at the Ex-pence of the Senate. On the 25th of April he set out thence to visit the principal Towns of Lombardy and the Milanese, from whence he was to repair to Turin, and thence, as some say, to make a Tour to France, tho' they question whether he will go to Paris.

Whereas there has been lately published in some of our Papers, a Letter or two highly reflecting on the Character of the Marquis de Monti, I have thought fit to publish likewise a Letter concerning him, which comes from a Person of Honour in France.

To the Author of the LONDON EVENING POST.

SIR,

EVERY Body here has heard, with the utmost Surprise and Indignation, of a Letter publish'd in your Paper of the 16th of April, in which the Marquis de Monti is most falsely and insolently abus'd. I am perfectly persuad'd, that there is not a Man in Europe, who knows any thing of what lately pass'd in the North; but must be acquainted with the great Character the Marquis bore there of Probity, Generosity, and Disinterestedness. All who are returned from thence, speak of him with the highest Esteem, many with Gratitude for Obligations received from him, or which they are daily receiving.

I may add, that the Honours already conferred on him, and the Credit he continues to enjoy, are indisputable Proofs of the Approbation of the Princes who employ'd and confid'd in him, and of the universal Esteem of the Publick.

I hope, Sir, that before this Time, you are satisfied of the Falshood of the Facts in that Letter, and that out of Regard to Justice, and for the Credit of your Paper, you will contradict the Misinformations in it. You are not a greater Stranger to the Person of the Marquis de Monti, than I am; it is for Truth that I am chiefly concerned; and I am the more zealous for a Reparation, as I am convinced, that his Contempt of the Calumny will make him intirely neglect it.

I am, SIR,

Paris, May 15.

Humble Servant.
